

Building a better VHDL testing environment

Joren Guillaume

Supervisors: Prof. Luc Colman, dhr. Hendrik Eeckhaut (Sigasi)

Counsellor: dhr. Lieven Lemingre (Sigasi)

Master's dissertation submitted in order to obtain the academic degree of Master of Science in de industriële wetenschappen: elektronica-ICT

Department of Industrial Technology and Construction

Chairman: Prof. Marc Vanhaelst

Faculty of Engineering and Architecture

Academic year 2014-2015

Usage restrictions

The author gives permission to make this master dissertation available for consultation and to copy parts of this master dissertation for personal use. In the case of any other use, the copyright terms have to be respected, in particular with regard to the obligation to state expressly the source when quoting results from this master dissertation.

Preface

Abstract

Using the Document Class phdsymp.cls

Joris Thybaut

Supervisor(s): Eric Laermans, Luc Dupré

Abstract—This article explains how to use the L<sup>A</sup>T<sub>E</sub>X style recommended for the Proceedings of the FTW PhD Symposium. The article is itself an example of the phdsymp.cls style in action.

Keywords—Style file, L<sup>A</sup>T<sub>E</sub>X, FTW PhD Symposium

I. INTRODUCTION

THE Symposium covers a wide range of topics and reflects the diversity of research activities at our Faculty, such as:

- Applied Physics
- Architecture
- Automation
- ...

Authors who have prepared their articles using L<sup>A</sup>T<sub>E</sub>X can get them formatted in the style we would like to recommend for the Proceedings of the Symposium. The style file phdsymp.cls can be used together with the bibliography style file phdsymp.bst.

We recommend a double column style as this makes the article easier to read. The column width is 21 pica (approximately 90 mm). In this sample file you will find examples for the layout of displayed equations, theorems, tables, figures, etc.

II. HOW TO USE THE FILE PHDSYMP.CLS

A. General Information

This style file has been written so to allow, with very few changes, the formatting of input that is suitable for the L<sup>A</sup>T<sub>E</sub>X article style. First, the phdsymp.cls style file has to be selected with a command of the form

```
\documentclass[twocolumn]{phdsymp}
```

The default font size is 10 points.

The Symposium Proceedings will not include author affiliations below or beside the name(s) of the author(s); instead, use the command `\thanks{...}` to list addresses. Note that the `\thanks{...}` command in the title no longer produce marks: the thanks-footnote should therefore be self-contained, with address and name of the author(s).

The command “`\PARstart{X}{YYY} ZZZ`” produces a large letter X at the beginning of the paragraph. The string YYY will be automatically changed to capital letters.

The bibliography style file phdsymp.bst allows B<sup>I</sup>B<sup>T</sup><sub>E</sub>X to include the references from the chosen bibliography file(s) according to the format recommended for the Symposium Proceedings.

Footnotes produce a footnote mark as usual.<sup>1</sup>

J. Thybaut is with the Chemical Engineering Department, Ghent University (UGent), Gent, Belgium. E-mail: Joris.Thybaut@UGent.be .

<sup>1</sup>The footnote is indicated by a footnote mark

In figure ?? we can see an example for the definition of the title page and of the main commands needed to compile a L<sup>A</sup>T<sub>E</sub>Xfile with phdsymp.cls.

---

```
\documentclass[twocolumn]{phdsymp}

\usepackage{times}

\begin{document}

\title{Using the Document Class phdsymp.cls}

\author{Joris Thybaut \thanks{J.~Thybaut is...}}

\supervisor{Eric Laermans, Luc Dupr\'e}

\maketitle

\begin{abstract}
This article ...
\end{abstract}

\begin{keywords}
Style file...
\end{keywords}

\section{Introduction}
\PARstart{T}{he} Symposium ...

\bibliographystyle{phdsymp}
\bibliography{bib-file}

\end{document}
```

---

Fig. 1. Input used to produce this paper.

B. Additional Changes

Most changes resulting from the use of phdsymp.cls should be transparent to the user. For instance, captions for figures and tables have been modified. Caption of tables, however, should be defined before the table item.

B.1 Environments

The environments for theorem, propositions, lemmas, etc. can be defined with the usual L<sup>A</sup>T<sub>E</sub>X `[?]`, `[?]` command `\newtheorem{...}{...}`. The proof environment is already defined.

Fig. 2. This is a sample figure. The caption comes after the figure.

TABLE I
THE CAPTION COMES BEFORE THE TABLE.

	title page	odd page	even page
onesided	leftTEXT	leftTEXT	leftTEXT
twosided	leftTEXT	rightTEXT	leftTEXT

Theorem 1 (Theorem name) Consider the system

$$\begin{aligned}\dot{x} &= Ax + Bu \\ y &= Cx + Du\end{aligned}\quad (1)$$

If  $A$  is stable, then the pair  $\{A, B\}$  is stabilizable. Moreover, this holds for any  $B$ .

Proof: The proof is trivial. ■

III. OPTIONAL FORMATTING

When you are happy with the ultimate unequivocal final version, you may perform following additional changes, although this is certainly not necessary.

A. “Hard-Coding” Symbolics

Change the symbolics so that the file actually contains the reference numbers i.e. “... \cite{fred:88} ...” should be changed to “... [3] ...”. One author (who used the style file) did a smart thing after he had decided upon a final version. He put his \cite{...} command and other symbolics on a line on their own and commented them out (from the formatting) by putting a % sign before each symbolic. Then, on the next line he just inserted the copy-matching numerical, like this:

```
Well, according the Fred Bloggs %\cite{fred:88}
[24]
the value of  $\alpha$  should be even greater than what we think it should be.
```

Thus, he knows he put in the correct (copy-matching) numerical and the publishing staff can send him back an author-proof that correctly matches his submission. This is not so useful here as we do not expect you to send the  $\LaTeX$ file, but a PDF-version of your article.

The above also applies to the referencing of table and figures (and any “auto-numbering” feature, standard or synonymous with your system).

Figure captions can be part of the text (in between paragraphs) like this:

And in Fig. 3 we see that the value of  $\alpha$  increases exponentially.

Fig. 3\quad This is the caption for figure 3 showing some  $\alpha$ .

And after the caption we continue on with the next paragraph, like this.

In essence, by you actually putting in the correct copy matching numerals so that no problems arise with incomplete files being sent to the transactions (the wrong \*.bib, \*.bbl files, the wrong versions of figures etc). Also, and more importantly, the numbers that are on your hard-copy (and in the reviewer’s hands) will be the same ones that you receive in your author proof. Again, this is not so useful here as we do not expect you to send the  $\LaTeX$ file, but a PDF-version of your article.

B. Including the Bibliography into the $\LaTeX$ Source File

You can reduce the number of files you have to send to the publishers in the following way. Run  $\BibTeX$  on the \*.aux file. This creates a \*.bbl file: include this into your  $\LaTeX$  source file at the place where you defined the \bibliography{...} command and comment this command out. Remove the \*.bbl file. Then, your  $\LaTeX$  file will include all the necessary information about your bibliography and no \*.bbl or \*.bib file will be needed.

This may seem like an awful lot of work... but not really.. This will allow to process your paper quickly and efficiently, and assure you that what you send in will actually be sent back to you without mistakes (cites, refs etc.).

However, this would only have been useful if you had been requested to send the  $\LaTeX$ file itself instead of a PDF-version of the article.

IV. CONCLUSIONS

This sample article has presented the style file phdsymp.cls This file can be especially useful in preparing articles for submission to the FTW PhD Symposium.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The authors would like to acknowledge the suggestions of many people.

REFERENCES

- [1] Leslie Lamport, A Document Preparation System:  $\LaTeX$ , User’s Guide and Reference Manual, Addison Wesley Publishing Company, 1986.
- [2] Helmut Kopka,  $\LaTeX$ , eine Einführung, Addison-Wesley, 1989.
- [3] D.K. Knuth, The  $\TeX$ book, Addison-Wesley, 1989.
- [4] D.E. Knuth, The METAFONTbook, Addison Wesley Publishing Company, 1986.

Contents

I	Problem and background	12
1	Problem	12
2	Introduction	13
2.1	Digital Electronics . . . . .	13
2.2	Hardware Description Languages . . . . .	14
2.3	Test Driven Development . . . . .	15
2.3.1	Unit Testing . . . . .	15
2.3.2	Test First Development . . . . .	16
2.3.3	Refactoring . . . . .	16
2.3.4	Test Driven Development . . . . .	16
3	Testing VHDL	17
4	Exploring solutions	18
4.1	Continuous Integration . . . . .	18
4.1.1	Revision Control . . . . .	18
4.1.2	Build Automation . . . . .	18
4.1.3	Test Automation . . . . .	18
4.2	Modelsim . . . . .	19
5	The future of testing	20
6	Conclusion	21
II	Appendix	23

List of Figures

1    Typical CMOS design flow . . . . . 15

List of Tables

List of Acronyms and Abbreviations

Part I

Problem and background

1 Problem

Developing VHDL, like any code, is prone to error creation, either by user or by wrong product specifications. To ensure errors are weeded out before the more expensive production begins, the code must be subjected to rigorous testing. Currently, large and impractical tests are needed to fully test a product.

Because testing is such a time consuming process, finding errors often results in severe delays due to the need to both correct the error and test for others. Therefore it is in the best interests of both testing- and software engineers to find and correct errors with minimal delay and maximal efficiency. This process should affect the least amount of code possible in order to minimize time spent retesting and modifying the code.

In this thesis, a number of mechanics are used to optimize both testing and coding. Based loosely off of Test Driven Development (TDD), tests are written to function and be tested independently. In order to maximize coverage and keep the time spent writing tests to a minimum, a library with often used functions and other useful code is made available. Alongside of it is a tool, written in Python, to process tests independently and represent the results in a quick and easy-to-read format.

2 Introduction

2.1 Digital Electronics

There are two kinds of electronic appliances and circuits; digital and analogue. Digital electronics differ from analogue electronics in that they use a discrete set of voltage levels to transmit signals. The most common number of items in the set is 2, a level for one (commonly named high) and a level for zero (commonly named ground or low). The advantage of using a discrete number of levels rather than a continuous signal as is used in analogue electronics, is that noise generated by the environment, thermal noise and other interfering factors will have but a minor influence on the signal.

To process these discrete signals, electronics are made up of transistors that nowadays are formed in with the Complementary Metal Oxide Semiconductor (CMOS) technology. This technology uses both an NPN and a PNP transistor that work in a push-pull configuration. The p's and n's in NPN and PNP simply stand for Positive and Negative. They are made of positively and negatively doped lumps of semiconductor (usually silicon-dioxide or SiO<sub>2</sub>). A transistor is basically a blockage on a track and depending on the force applied to its gate, it opens or closes the track.

In reality, the force takes the form of a current and an NPN transistor opens its gate when a positive current is applied. A PNP transistor, however, always leaves its gate open until a current is applied. This means that if we send the same signal to an NPN and a PNP transistor, with one of the signals inverted, we can open and close two parts of the entire circuit at the same time. This is useful to both direct a certain signal to ground and at the same time close its connection with the source (the power source). Hence also the name Complementary MOS, the NPN and PNP complement each other.

A certain combination of transistors is used to make logic gates. These logic gates make sure that only a certain combination of ones and zeroes at the inputs result in certain ones or zeroes at the outputs. For instance, one of the most common logic gates is a nand gate (a not and gate). This gate has a number of inputs ranging from 2 to theoretically infinity (but practically 3 or 4) and only outputs a low signal if all of the inputs are high (digital one), otherwise its output is at ground or low (digital zero). The other most common logic gate is the nor gate (a not or gate). This gate outputs a low signal if any of its inputs are high, otherwise it outputs a low.

A common mistake is to think that low or ground mean zero voltage. This is only partially true, the high signals are measured with ground as their reference. So a high signal of 1.8 V would be 1.8 V higher than ground, and could be considered to be at 1.8 V if ground is the theoretical zero. These logic gates are themselves combined to build higher-level blocks such as flip-flops, which are used to make registers and so on up to the entire chip design.

2.2 Hardware Description Languages

A Hardware Description Language (HDL) can be used to describe any one of the levels mentioned in the previous section, right down to the logic gate level. However, this last one is wholly unnecessary considering synthesis tools can produce superior logic gate-level layouts [1]. The level that uses certain blocks of logic gates to describe more complex behaviour is called the Register Transfer Level or RTL. Some blocks are standard implementations that have been widely used and are nearly fully optimized, such as memories, flip-flops and clocks. An RTL flip-flop implementation is shown here:

```
library IEEE;
use IEEE.std_logic_1164.all;
entity DFF is
    Port(D    : in std_logic;
         CLK  : in std_logic;
         Q    : out std_logic;
end DFF;
architecture Behavioural of DFF is
begin
    process (CLK)
    begin
        if rising_edge(CLK) then Q <= D;
        end if;
    end process;
end Behavioural;
```

The IEEE library provides a number of extensions on the original VHDL specification that allow a more realistic simulation and description of hardware behaviour. An entity defines the inputs and outputs of a certain building block, in this case the D Flip-flop or DFF. The D stands for Delay, and it simply puts on its output, Q, that which was on the input, D, one clock period earlier. The architecture, in this case Behavioural, takes the description of an entity and assigns a real implementation to it. All processes are executed in parallel, this does not mean that all are triggered at the same time, nor do they take equally as long to finish, but it means that any process can be executed alongside any other process. In this case there is only one (nameless) process that describes the entire behaviour of the flip-flop. The process waits for the rising edge of the clock, which is a transition from zero to one, after which it schedules the value of D to be put on Q when the next rising edge appears.

This is a basic example of an entity, an architecture and a process. This flip-flop could be used in certain numbers to build a register, a collection of ones and zeroes (henceforth referred to as bits) that is used to (temporarily) store these values. The register could then be used alongside combinational logic to build an even bigger entity. The idea here is that small building blocks can be combined to produce vast and complex circuits that are nearly impossible to describe in one go. Adding all these layers together also creates a lot of room for error, and having a multi-level design makes it challenging to pinpoint the exact level and location of any errors. Therefore, it is paramount that all code on all levels is tested thoroughly, which is done by use of testbenches [2].

Testbenches are made up of code that takes a certain building block, the Unit Under Test (UUT) or Device Under Test (DUT). The testbench then puts a certain sequence of values on the inputs and monitors the outputs. If the device performs normally, the received output sequence should match a certain golden reference, the expected output sequence. In these testbenches it is good practice to observe how well a device performs if its inputs behave outside of the normal mode of operation. When all of these tests have finished and the output performs as expected, the device is ready to be put into production or further down the developmental process.

If a device is not tested properly and faults propagate throughout development, they can be very expensive to correct, especially at the stage of production, where a single photomask, used to “print” part of the layout, can easily cost $100,000 [3]. Therefore a large portion of time is spent writing and executing tests[4]. A large number of practices to improve both the speed and quality of testing and coding exist, but the focus chosen in this thesis is Test Driven Development (TDD). This practice has proven to increase test coverage [5], decrease defect density [7] as well as improve code quality [7, 8].

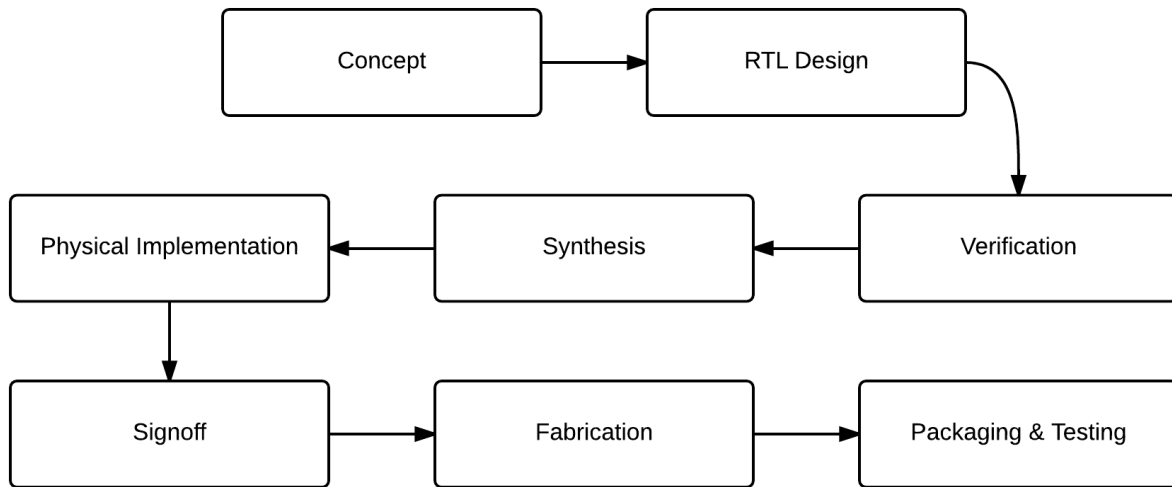

Figure 1: Typical CMOS design flow

2.3 Test Driven Development

Test Driven Development is a proven development technique that has regained traction in the past decade, primarily through the efforts of Kent Beck [?]. The technique focuses on tests being created before the actual code. It is important to make certain distinctions before going more in depth on the used methods. The developing community has a great many practices, each with their own names and methods, and hardly none are mutually exclusive.

2.3.1 Unit Testing

To understand TDD, an basic knowledge of Unit Testing is required. In software testing, a unit test is a test designed to check a single unit of code. Ideally, this unit is the smallest piece in which the code can be divided. A unit test should always test only a single entity, and only one aspect of that entity's behaviour. This division in units has a number of benefits, one of the most important being that code is exceedingly easy to maintain. Furthermore, the division of the code makes changes, when needed, fast to be carried out and ensures that only the modified code needs to be re-tested.

2.3.2 Test First Development

Another main component of TDD is Test First Development, a technique that has a developer writing tests first, before any code has been written. This method makes the developer think on what the code has to achieve, rather than what the specific implementation has to be. A key feature of a new test is that it has to fail during its first run. If not, the test is obsolete seeing as the functionality it tests has already been implemented. After being run for the first time (and failing), the developer implements just enough code to get the test to pass. Once the test succeeds, it is time for a new test.

2.3.3 Refactoring

The third pillar of TDD is refactoring. After the tests succeed, it is necessary to clean up the code. A well-done TFD implementation uses the bare amount of code needed to make the test pass, but this is of course usually not the best code possible. Refactoring means that you take existing code and modify only the code itself to perform better. This leaves both the input and output of the tests and code unchanged, only the way the code processes input is altered. It is important in this step to edit nothing in the test code or the outputs or inputs. Otherwise, either the test would behave differently or new tests would have to be written. The latter goes directly against the TFD principle.

2.3.4 Test Driven Development

Test Driven Development is a combination of the previously mentioned techniques. A Unit Test is written before any code, the test is then executed and should fail. After the failure, the most basic code to make the test pass is implemented, the test is then executed again and should pass. After this first pass, the code written for the passing of the test, and only this code, is edited to perform and look better. This follows all steps mentioned above, a Unit Test is written according to Test First Development and is Refactored later.

3 Testing VHDL

4 Exploring solutions

During the making of this thesis, a number of approaches was investigated and some were put to practical use. Ultimately, the most practical and straightforward approach was to implement a form of Unit Testing. Alongside, an extensive library, written in VHDL, was used to ease the building of testbenches. Finally, a central server was installed that repeatedly and automatically ran the script and read the resulting test outputs.

4.1 Continuous Integration

Continuous Integration (CI) is a software development technique in which developers upload the edits on the software, or their build, to a central server which then continuously integrates the code from multiple developers. This to prevent integration headaches when the code of multiple developers has diverged to such an extent that it would take much more time to make the edits work together than if they had been integrated early on.

4.1.1 Revision Control

There are many aspects to a properly maintained CI system, but one key aspect of overall programming has to be revision control. Not to be confused with the "undo" button in your preferred editor, a good RC system does allow for any and all mistakes made over different edits to be undone with very little work. There exist many systems for revision control, but they all have in common that they track changes one way or the other, and most importantly that these changes can be undone.

4.1.2 Build Automation

A useful but not required aspect is build automation. Using a timer or trigger, the build automatically runs with the latest updates, preferably from an RC system. This way, the binaries are always up to date and the developer does not need to wait for compilation to run the latest tests. Although the latter is less imported in a proper CI system as will be discussed further on.

4.1.3 Test Automation

As the code is build at scheduled times, and testing is needed regardless it makes perfect sense to add a testing step to the automated build. Automating tests saves the developers yet another part of their time, thus freeing more for the actual development and debugging steps. A good CI system can read test reports, or at least some standard of reports.

Combining all of these practices saves developers a lot of time and, by extension, the company they might work for, a lot of money. Considering today's competitive market for software development, any edge that can be obtained is a plus. Even more so when plenty of free Continuous Integration servers exist that employ open or widely used standards. The CI solution that was used throughout this thesis is Hudson-CI. Hudson provides an extensive range of features, including everything listed above. The used features are:

- Timed and triggered building from an RC repository.
- Automated testing of said build.
- Humanly readable reports in the JUnit format.
- Graphical and statistical overview of test progress throughout builds.

4.2 Modelsim

As mentioned in section 2 HDLs are used for developing hardware, and need to be tested and build as such. Like any other programming language, they need a dedicated compiler to fault-check the code and build the binaries. Unlike other programming languages, however, they need a simulator in order to verify the builds.

ModelSim is the simulator that was used for several reasons. First, a free student edition was available. Considering licenses outside of school can easily cost upward of $25,000 this made it ideal for any thesis or student related work. Second, ModelSim supports all versions of VHDL, which is the HDL we are processing. And last, but not least, ModelSim is one of the industry's most used simulators, making the research done of practical use.

5 The future of testing

6 Conclusion

References

- [1] <http://www.asic-world.com/vhdl/intro1.html>
- [2] Writing Testbenches: Functional Verification of HDL Models
- [3] Mask Cost and Profitability in Photomask Manufacturing: An Empirical Analysis
- [4] Citation needed !!
- [5] A comparative case study on the impact of test-driven development on program design and test coverage
- [6] <http://martinfowler.com/bliki/UnitTest.html>
- [7] A Longitudinal Study of the Use of a Test-Driven Development Practice in Industry
- [8] Evaluating the Efficacy of Test-Driven Development

Code

23

```

Sets up (temporary) files , sets global vars , processes cmdline arguments with argparse
##
args is the arguments part of an argparse.ArgumentParser
The possible expected arguments are c,l,f,d,s; for further explanation see setup_parser()
##
Tempname_t is the random name used throughout the script , it has no constraints for being different
##
Foldername_t is the path to the folder that will contain all permanent logs and results
##
def setup(args, tempname_t=None, foldername_t=None):
    if (tempname_t == None):
        tempname_t = tempname
    if (foldername_t == None):
        foldername_t = foldername

    if not args.cmdline:
        folderpath_t = os.path.join(os.getcwd(), 'VHDL_TDD_Parser')
        if (not os.path.isdir(folderpath_t)):
            os.makedirs(folderpath_t)
            logbuffer('n','Created\working_directory\'VHDL_TDD_Parser\'for\the\first\time.') outputdir = time.strftime('%Y.%m.%d-%H.%M.%S') + tempname_t foldername_t = os.path.join(folderpath_t, outputdir)
            if (os.path.isdir(outputdir)):
                logbuffer('n','Output_directory\'\' + tempname_t + \'\'already\existed.')
            else:
                os.makedirs(foldername_t)
        else:
            folderpath_t = os.path.join(os.environ['USERPROFILE'], 'VHDL_TDD_Parser')
            if (not os.path.isdir(folderpath_t)):
                os.makedirs(folderpath_t)
                logbuffer('n','Created\working_directory\'VHDL_TDD_Parser\'for\the\first\time.')
                outputdir = time.strftime('%Y.%m.%d-%H.%M.%S') + tempname_t
                foldername_t = os.path.join(folderpath_t, outputdir)
                if (os.path.isdir(outputdir)):
                    logbuffer('n','Output_directory\'\' + tempname_t + \'\'already\existed.')
                else:
                    os.makedirs(foldername_t)
            return foldername_t

Stores log reports in a buffer until the logfile is made
##
level is the criticality of the logwrite. It can be notice, warning, severe, critical or unknown
Some levels are not (yet) used and may be obsolete
##
message is the actual logmessage, with no timestamps or level
##
tempname_t is the unique identifier for the testbench run
##
args_t is the argument parser object generated in setup_parser()
##
def logbuffer(level='n', message='No_message\given.', tempname_t=None, args_t=None):
    global logs_buffer
    if logstarted:
        logwrite(level, message, tempname_t, args_t)
    else:
        logs_buffer.append([level, message, time.strftime('%Y.%m.%d-%H.%M.%S'), ])

Writes things to the logbook: errors, completed jobs etc.
Logwrite is fully explained above near logbuffer
Logwrite cannot function without global variables logstarted and logs_buffer
def logwrite(level='n', message='No_message\given.', foldername_t=None, tempname_t=None, args_t=None):
    if (tempname_t == None):
        tempname_t = tempname
    if (args_t == None):
        args_t = args
    if (foldername_t == None):

```

```

foldername_t = foldername

dest = ''
if (args_t.log):
    dest = get_path(args_t.log)
else:
    dest = foldername_t

##FORMAT: Timestamp |tab Level |tab Message
levels = {'n': 'notice', 'w': 'warning', 's': 'severe', 'c': 'critical', 'u': 'unknown'};
logfile = open(dest + os.sep + 'logfile.txt', 'a+') logfile.seek(0)

first_char = logfile.read(1)
if first_char != '#':
    logfile.write('#####\n') logfile.write('##### LOGFILE_FOR_ + tempname.t + ', #####\n')
    logfile.write('#####\n')
    logfile.write('#####\n')
    logfile.write('YYYY.MM.DD_ _HH:MM:SS_ _LEVEL_ _MESSAGE\n')
else:
    logfile.seek(2)

global logstarted
if (not logstarted):
    logstarted = True
    for command in logs_buffer:
        logfile.write(command[2] + ' _ _ _' + (levels[command[0]] + '\t').expandtabs(5) + ' _ _ _' + command[1] + '\n') logfile.write(time.strftime('%X.%m.%d_ _%H:%M:%S') + ' _ _ _ _ _'.expandtabs(5) + '\t').expandtabs(5) + message + '\n') logfile.close()

Returns absolute path if not already absolute path, otherwise return argument unchanged
def get_path(path):
    if (not os.path.isabs(path)):
        path = os.path.abspath(path)
    return path

Prepares the parser to accept correct cmdline arguments
def setup_parser():
    parser = argparse.ArgumentParser( description='VHDL testbench to JDD parser', formatter_class=argparse.ArgumentDefaultsHelpFormatter)
    # The -c/--cmd argument is to specify the script being called from the commandline.
    # The flag is stored in 'cmd', default value is 'False', parser.add_argument('-c', '--cmd', help='specifies script being called from commandline, not automated', action='store_true', dest='cmdline', default=False)
    # The -d/--dest argument is to specify a custom folderpath for the log.
    # The flag is stored in 'log', default value is 'None', parser.add_argument('-d', '--dest', help='specifies a custom folder for the log', action='store', dest='log', default=None)
    # The -f/--file argument is to specify that the -l/--list is a file/files containing a list of .vhd files.
    # The flag is stored in 'file', default value is 'False', parser.add_argument('-f', '--file', help='specifies -l/--list is a file with a list', action='store_true', default=False)
    # The -l/--list argument is to specify the list of .vhd files to be processed.
    # The flag is stored in 'list', no default value considering there NEEDS to be at least 1 .vhd file
    parser.add_argument('-l', '--list', help='specifies the list of .vhd files to be processed, ONLY .vhd files',
                        action='store',
                        nargs='+', required=True, metavar='path')
    # The -m/--method argument is to specify which method of writing was used in testbench creation.
    # The flag is stored in 'list', no default value considering there NEEDS to be at least 1 .vhd file
    parser.add_argument('-m', '--method',

```

```

, help='specifies what method was used to write the testbench.',
, action='store',
, default='line', choices=['line', 'startstop', 'partitioned'])
The -p/--precompiled argument is to locate a precompiled library that will be needed during simulation.
The flag is stored in 'list', no default value considering there NEEDS to be at least 1 .vhd file
parser.add_argument('-p', '--precompiled',
, help='specifies the location of the precompiled dependencies, requires a full path.',
, action='store',
, dest='prepath', metavar='path', default=None)
The -v/--version argument is to compile in a different VHDL version other than 2008.
The flag is stored in 'version', default value is 2008
parser.add_argument('-v', '--version',
, help='specifies a different VHDL version, default is 2008',
, action='store',
, default='2008', metavar='version')
The -s/--script argument is to specify the testbench(es) use the scriptstart/scriptend comments
The flag is stored in 'script', default value is 'False', parser.add_argument('-s', '--script',
, help='specifies the testbenches use the ScriptStart and ScriptEnd comments',
, action='store_true', default=False)

return parser

Creates the temporary working directory
def make_tempdir():
char_set = string.ascii_uppercase + string.digits
tempname_t = ''.join(random.sample(char_set*8,8))
tempdir_t = tempfile.gettempdir() + os.sep + tempname_t

while(os.path.isdir(tempdir_t)):
tempname_t = ''.join(random.sample(char_set*8,8))
tempdir_t = tempfile.gettempdir() + os.sep + tempname_t

os.makedirs(tempdir_t)
return tempdir_t, tempname_t

grabs sourcefile, extracts needed code, arranges functions & procedures
def parse_source(path, method=None):
if (method==None):
method=args.method
archstart = False

try:
source = open(path)
except:
logbuffer('c','Could not open file' + str(path) + ', ignoring.')
return ['ERROR', path]
line = source.readline()
line_lower = line.lower()
words = line_lower.split(' ') header, archheader, body, footer = '','','','' entname, archname = '','', templist = []
tests = 0

while not archstart:
if (line == ''):
logwrite('c','Reached end of source file without an architecture in file' + str(path) + ',')
return ['ERROR', path]
if words:
if (words[0] == 'entity'):
entname = words[1]
if (words[0] == 'architecture'):
archstart = True

```

```

    archname = words[1]
    archheader += line
    else:
        header += line
        line = source.readline()
        line_lower = line.lower().strip()
        words = line_lower.split(' ')

    if (method=='startstop'):
        scriptstart, scriptend = False, False
        while (not scriptstart):
            if (line == ''):
                # Check whether scriptstart/end is being used with 'script'
                logwrite('c','Reached_end_of_source_file_without_encountering\''--scriptstart\''_despite_s_flag_specified_in_file_' + str(path) + '.')
                return ['ERROR', path]
            archheader += line
            if (line_lower.strip() == '--scriptstart'):
                scriptstart = True
            line = source.readline()
            line_lower = line.lower()

        while (not scriptend):
            if (line == ''):
                # All lines between scriptstart and scriptend are placed in the body
                logwrite('c','Reached_end_of_source_file_without_encountering\''--scriptstop\''_despite_s_flag_specified_in_file_' + str(path) + '.')
                return ['ERROR', path]
            elif (line_lower.strip() == '--scriptend'):
                scriptend = True
                footer += line
            else:
                body += line
            line = source.readline()
            line_lower = line.lower()

        footer += line
        for line in source:
            footer += line
        source.close()

    elif (method=='line'):
        archbody, archend = False, False beginwords = ['function', 'procedure', 'for', 'while', 'if', 'process', 'component', ]
        depth = 0

        while not archbody:
            if (line == ''):
                logwrite('c','Reached_end_of_source_file_with_incorrect_architecture_body_(found_no_begin)_in_file_' + str(path) + '.')
                return ['ERROR', path]
            if words:
                if depth == 0 and words[0] == 'begin':
                    archbody = True
                elif words[0] in beginwords:
                    depth += 1
                elif words[0] == 'end':
                    depth -= 1
            archheader += line
            line = source.readline()
            line_lower = line.lower().strip()
            words = line_lower.split(' ')

            depth = 0
            process_start, process_begin = False, False

        while not archend:
            if (line == ''):
                logwrite('c','Reached_end_of_source_file_with_incorrect_architecture_body_(found_no_end)_in_file_' + str(path) + '.')
                return ['ERROR', path]
            if not process_begin:
                if words:

```

```

if not process_start:
    if 'process' in words:
        process_start = True
    else:
        if depth == 0 and words[0] == 'begin':
            process_begin = True
        elif words[0] in beginwords:
            depth += 1
        elif words[0] == 'end':
            depth -= 1
        archheader += line
    else:
        if words:
            if (line_lower in ['end_architecture;', 'end_' + archname + ';', 'end_architecture' + archname + ';']):
                archend = True
            footer += line
            elif (words[0] in ['end', 'wait;']):
                footer += line
            else:
                body += line
                line = source.readline()
                line_lower = line.lower().strip()
                words = line_lower.split(',')
        for line in source:
            footer += line
            source.close()

elif (method=='partitioned'):
    in_test = False
    temp_lines = ''
    while (line != ''):
        if (in_test):
            if (len(line) > 4):
                if (line_lower[0:5] == '--end'):
                    in_test = False
                    templist.append(temp_lines)
                    temp_lines = ''
                else:
                    temp_lines += line
            else:
                temp_lines += line
        elif (len(line) > 5):
            if (line_lower[0:6] == '--test'):
                in_test = True
                tests += 1
            else:
                if (tests == 0):
                    archheader += line
                else:
                    temp_lines += line
                line = source.readline()
                line_lower = line.lower().strip()
                words = line_lower.split(',')
        if (tests == 0):
            logwrite('c', 'Reached_end_of_source_file_prematurely_in_file_' + str(path) + ',') footer = temp_lines
            source.close()

if (method != 'partitioned'):
    bodylines = body.split('\n')
    for line in bodylines:

```

# Finding the process that envelopes the functions

# If the 'begin' is the begin of the process

# Else, check for 'depth' changing words

# 'wait;' and 'end process;' don't count as tests

# All remaining lines, if any, are placed in the footer

# Find the start of the script, add all lines before the start to the header

# Lines in the body are all single tests/functions (or should be)

```

        if line.strip():
            tests += 1
            templst.append(line)

        else:
            tests = len(templst)

            if (tests == 1):
                logwrite('\n','Successfully_parsed_' + entname + '._' + archname + '._with_' + str(tests) + '._testsuite_found.')
            else:
                logwrite('\n','Successfully_parsed_' + entname + '._' + archname + '._with_' + str(tests) + '._testsuites_found.') return [archname, entname, header, archheader, footer, templst]

arranges found functions & procedures in their own executable files
def test_format(parsedlist_t = None):
    if parsedlist_t == None:
        ## Format: parsedlist is a tuple of tuples: [archname, entname, header, archheader, footer, list_of_tests]
        testcount = {}

    da = 0
    for parsedfile in parsedlist_t:
        if parsedfile[0] != 'ERROR':
            archname = parsedfile[0] entname = parsedfile[1]
            header = parsedfile[2]
            archheader = parsedfile[3] footer = parsedfile[4]
            tests = parsedfile[5]

            localcount = 0
            localname = entname + '._' + archname + '._' + str(da) + '._vhd' testfile_path = tempdir + os.sep + localname testfile = open(testfile_path, 'w+') testfile.write('library _TDD;\nuse _TDD.vhdlUnit.all;\n') testfile.write(header)

            for test in tests:
                testfile.write(archheader.replace(archname, archname + str(localcount)))
                ## testfile.write('assert false report \'test started\' severity note;\n') testfile.write(test + '\n')
                ## testfile.write('assert false report \'test ended\' severity note;\n')
                testfile.write(footer.replace(archname, archname + str(localcount)) + '\n\n') localcount += 1
            testfile.close()
            testcount[localname] = localcount

        else:
            logwrite('\n','Ignoring_test_' + str(len(testcount)) + '._file:_' + str(parsedfile[1]))
            da += 1
    return testcount

grabs processed source/files, executes & captures output
testcount_t is a dictionary of key: entityname.architecturename.vhd, with value the number of tests inside
def parse_tests(testcount_t = None, tempdir_t = None, foldername_t = None, foldername_t = None, currentdir_t = None):
    if (testcount_t == None):
        testcount_t = testcount
    if (tempdir_t == None):
        tempdir_t = tempdir
    if (foldername_t == None):
        foldername_t = foldername
    if (args_t == None):
        args_t = args
    if (currentdir_t == None):
        currentdir_t = currentdir

    args_t.prepath = get_path(args_t.prepath)

```

```

os.chdir(tempdir_t)
testcount = 0

Change working directory to the temporary folder

if (args_t.prepath != None):
    source = open(args_t.prepath, 'r+')
    for line in source:
        os.system(line.strip())
        #shutil.copytree(get_path(prepath), tempdir_t + os.sep + prepath.split(os.sep)[-1])
    os.system('vlib,TDD')
    os.system('vcom_' + args_t.version + '_quiet-work_TDD_' + currentdir_t + os.sep + 'vhdUnit.vhd')
    # Run across the dictionary, executing every test in each file
    # Make use of the vhdUnit 'reportback' function
    for key,value in testcount_t.iteritems():
        commands = 'vlib_work' + str(testcount) + '\n' + 'vcom_' + args_t.version + '_quiet-work_work' + str(testcount) + '\n' + key
        # Form a work directory per file

        for line in commands.split('\n'): os.system(line)

        words = str(key).split('.')
        entname = words[0]
        archname = words[1]

        outputname = words[0] + '.' + words[1] + '.' + words[2] outfile = open(os.getcwd() + os.sep + outputname + '_cmd_output.txt', 'w+') logwrite('n','Starting execution of tests in ' + str(key)) for test in range(0, value):
            readcmd = os.popen('vsim -c "work" + str(testcount) + '.' + entname + '(' + archname + str(test) + ') * _do_run_all; exit"').read() outfile.write(readcmd) outfile.close()
            shutil.copy(os.getcwd() + os.sep + outputname + '_cmd_output.txt', foldername_t)
            testcount += 1
        os.chdir(currentdir_t)

grabs output, formats output
def format(tempdir_t = None):
    if (tempdir_t == None):
        tempdir_t = tempdir
        testname = tempdir_t.split(os.sep)[-1]
        testresults = [testname, 0]
        currentdir = os.getcwd()
        os.chdir(tempdir_t)

    for file in os.listdir(tempdir_t):
        if file.endswith('_cmd_output.txt'):
            source = open(file, 'r+') testresult = [file.split('_cmd_output.txt')[0], 0]
            in_test = False
            prev = ''
            line = source.readline()

            while(line != ''):
                if (line == '#_run_all\n'):
                    test_name = prev.split('_')[0]
                    in_test = True
                while in_test:
                    line = source.readline()
                    words = line.split('_')
                    if (words[1] == 'Errors:' and words[3] == 'Warnings:'):
                        in_test = False
                    else:
                        if (line == '#_Note: test started\n'):
                            test = [test_name, True, 0, '']
                            line = source.readline()
                            line = source.readline()
                            no_test = True
                        # Currently no good detection on whether test passed or not!
                        # Test format is [Name, Test passed, NumberOfTests, testresult1, testresult2, ...]
                        # Skip 1 line with the time status

```

```

while (line != '#__Note:_test_ended\n'):
    no_test = False
    if (line == ''):
        logwrite('c', 'Encountered_faulty_results_in_' + 'Reached_EOF_mid-test.')
        in_test = False
        break
    if (len(line) > 12):
        if (line[5:10] != 'Time:'):
            test[2] += 1
            test[3] += '\n' + line
        else:
            test[2] += 1
            test[3] += '\n' + line
        line = source.readline()
        # This is the end of "while in_test:"
        # This is the end of "while (line != ''):
        testresults.append(testresult)
    os.chdir(currentdir)
    return testresults

grabs processed output, converts to JUnit compatible XML file # Available format is Package (collection of test suites with an own name)
containing test suites with each their own name and test count
Who each have test cases with their own name and error/success report
Format of testresults: [Name, Count, Testresult1, Testresult2, ...]
Testresult format is: [Name, Count, Test1, Test2, ...]
Test format is [Name, Test passed, NumberOfSubTests, testresult1, testresult2, ...]
def xmlwrite(testresults, foldername_t=None):
    if (foldername_t == None):
        foldername_t = foldername
    hostname = str(testresults[0]) xmltargetpath = foldername + os.sep + hostname + '_testresults.xml' xmltargetfile = open(xmltargetpath, 'w+') ts = []

    # JUnit-xml format is: TestCase(Name, ClassName, Elapsed_Time_In_Sec, Stdout, Stderr)
    # TestSuite(Name, Test_cases[], Hostname, ID, Package, Timestamp, Properties)
    for testresult in testresults[2:]:
        test_cases = []
        for test in testresult[2:]: testcase = TestCase(test[0], testresult[0], None)
            if (not test[1]):
                testcase.add_failure_info(None, test[3:]) test_cases.append(testcase) ts.append(TestSuite(testresult[0], test_cases, testresults[0])) xmltargetfile.write(TestSuite.to_xml_string(ts)) xmltargetfile.close()

def format2(tempdir, t=None, foldername_t=None):
    if (tempdir_t == None):
        tempdir_t = tempdir
    if (foldername_t == None):
        foldername_t = foldername
    testname = tempdir_t.split(os.sep)[-1]
    currentdir = os.getcwd()
    os.chdir(tempdir_t)

```

```

failedtests, passedtests, othernotes, totaltests = 0, 0, 0, 0
failedlines, passedlines, otherlines, everyline = [], [], [], []

for file in os.listdir(tempdir_t):
    # Get every file that is a commandline output file
    if file.endswith('_cmd_output.txt'):
        failedtests_l, passedtests_l, othernotes_l, totaltests_l = 0, 0, 0, 0
        failedlines_l, passedlines_l, otherlines_l, everyline_l = '', '', '', ''
        source = open(file, 'r+')

        ReadNote = False
        lastline = ''
        for line in source:
            words = line.split(' ')
            if ReadNote == True:
                if (len(words) > 5):
                    to_add = '␣time:␣' + words[5] + '␣' + words[6] + '\n'
                else:
                    to_add = line
                if lastline == 'success':
                    passedlines_l += to_add
                elif lastline == 'failed':
                    failedlines_l += to_add
                elif lastline == 'other':
                    otherlines_l += to_add
                everyline_l += to_add
            ReadNote = False

            elif (len(words) > 2):
                if (words[2] == 'Note:'):
                    ReadNote = True
                    if (len(words) > 4):
                        if (words[4] == 'failed\\tname:'):
                            failedtests_l += 1
                            totaltests_l += 1
                            failedlines_l += str(failedtests_l).zfill(4) + '␣' + line[11:-1] lastline = 'failed'
                        elif (words[4] == 'success\\tname:'):
                            passedtests_l += 1
                            totaltests_l += 1
                            passedlines_l += str(passedtests_l).zfill(4) + '␣' + line[11:-1].split(' ')[0] lastline = 'success'
                        else:
                            othernotes_l += 1
                            totaltests_l += 1
                            otherlines_l += str(othernotes_l).zfill(4) + '␣' + line[11:-1] lastline = 'other'
                    else:
                        othernotes_l += 1
                        totaltests_l += 1
                        otherlines_l += str(othernotes_l).zfill(4) + '␣' + line[11:-1]
                        lastline = 'other'
                        everyline_l += str(totaltests_l).zfill(4) + '␣' + line[11:-1]

if ReadNote == True:
    to_add = '␣time:␣' + words[5] + '␣' + words[6]
    if lastline == 'success':
        passedlines_l += to_add[1:-1]
    elif lastline == 'failed':
        failedlines_l += to_add
    elif lastline == 'other':
        otherlines_l += to_add
    everyline_l += to_add

failedtests += failedtests_l passedtests += passedtests_l

```

```

othernotes += othernotes_l totaltests += totaltests_l failedlines.append(failedlines_l) passedlines.append(passedlines_l) otherlines.append(otherlines_l) everyline.append(everyline_l)

source.close()

#Write plain .txt file with testresults
targetpath = foldername_t + os.sep + testname + '_testresults.txt' targetfile = open(targetpath, 'w+') + '\ntests_passed:\n' + str(totaltests)
+ '\ntests_failed:\n' + str(passedtests) + '\nother_notes:\n' + str(othernotes))

output_failed, output_passed, output_other, output_every = '', '', '', ''
for x in range(0, len(failedlines)):
    output_failed += failedlines[x]
    output_passed += passedlines[x] output_other += otherlines[x] output_every += everyline[x] targetfile.write('\n\nPassed tests reports:\n' + output_passed
+ '\n\nFailed tests reports:\n' + output_failed
+ '\n\nOther notes:\n'
+ '\n\nAll test results:\n' + output_every) print( 'totaltests:\n' + str(totaltests)

+ '\ntests_passed:\n' + str(passedtests)
+ '\ntests_failed:\n' + str(failedtests)
+ '\nother_notes:\n' + str(othernotes))
#Print left out - optional command line output

targetfile.close()
os.chdir(currentdir)
return everyline

#Write .xml file in JUnit format (For use in Eclipse)
#Uses JUnit-xml package by Brian Beyer
#source at https://github.com/kyrus/python-junit-xml
#Requires setuptools to install at https://pypi.python.org/pypi/setuptools
def xmlwrite2(everyline, foldername_t=None):
    if (foldername_t == None):
        foldername_t = foldername

    testname = foldername_t.split(os.sep)[-1] xmltargetpath = foldername_t + os.sep + foldername_t.split(os.sep)[-1] + '_testresults.xml' xmltargetfile = open(xmltargetpath, 'w+')

    test_suites = []
    suite_count = 1
    for lines in everyline:
        test_cases = []
        for line in lines.split('\n'):
            words = line.split(' ')
            if line.find('success') != -1:
                time_taken = get_time(line.split('-')[1][7:])
                name = words[0] + 'u' + line.split('-')[1].split('name:')[1].strip() test_cases.append(TestCase(name, testname, time_taken, None)) elif line.find('failed') != -1:
                time_taken = get_time(line.split('-')[1][7:])
                name = words[0] + 'u' + line.split('-')[1].split('name:')[1].strip() message = (" ".join(line.split('u')[2:-1])).strip() tc = TestCase(name, testname, time_taken, None)

```

```

tc.add_failure_info(None, message) test_cases.append(tc)
test_suites.append(TestSuite('TestSuite_number:' + str(suite_count), test_cases))
suite_count += 1

xmldatafile.write(TestSuite.to_xml_string(test_suites)) xmldatafile.close()

extracts the passed time from a modelsim time notice
def get_time(timestring):
    words = timestring.split(' ') new_time = float(words[0]) multiplier = 1
    if words[1] == 'ps':
        multiplier = 10(-12)
    elif words[1] == 'ns':
        multiplier = 10(-9)
    elif words[1] == 'us':
        multiplier = 10(-6)
    elif words[1] == 'ms':
        multiplier = 10(-3)
    return new_time * float(multiplier)

removes temporary files & directories
def cleanup():
    logwrite('n', 'Cleanup_started_at' + str(time.time()))
    shutil.rmtree(tempdir)

#####
MAIN PROGRAM STARTS HERE #####
#####
#Allows the code to be used as a module
if __name__ == "__main__":
    parsedlist, logs_buffer = [], [] logstarted = False
    tempdir, tempname, foldername = '', '', '' parser = None

    systemtime = time.time()
    currentdir = os.getcwd()

    parser = setup_parser()
    args, unknown = parser.parse_known_args() tempdir, tempname = make_tempdir() foldername = setup(args, tempname)

    logwrite('n', 'Started_script_at' + str(systemtime))
    if (unknown):
        logwrite('w', 'Found_unusable_arguments:' + ', '.join(unknown))

    if (args.file):
        for file in args.list:
            listfile = open(get_path(file)) sourcelist = [line.strip() for line in open(listfile)]
            for line in sourcelist:
                parsedlist.append(parse_source(get_path(line), args.method))
    else:
        for file in args.list:
            parsedlist.append(parse_source(get_path(file), args.method)) testcount = test_format(parsedlist)

    if args.cmdline:

```

# A buffer is needed for loglines from before the logdirectory was created
# Future variables that will be used throughout the script
# Assigning name for the parser
# Marks the starting time of the script
# CWD is changed during simulation
# Creates an argument parser for the commandline arguments
# Parses commandline arguments, stores unknown arguments in 'unknown'
# Creates a unique (name for the) temporary directory in the systems temp dir
# Grab all functions and procedures to be processed, returns output folder

# If there are unknown arguments, write error to log

# If the files to be processed are in a file
# Get all filenames
# Open the files one by one
# Get all .vhd files listed within # Parse each .vhd file

# If arguments are not lists, they are the files themselves

# Get list of number of tests
# Location of vhdUnit.vhd may vary on how the script is called

```

    parse_tests(testcount, tempdir, foldername, args)
else:
    parse_tests(testcount, tempdir, foldername, args, os.path.dirname(os.path.realpath(__file__)))
    # Format the testresults to humanly readable words
    # Format the above format into a JUnit-XML format
    testresults = format2(tempdir) xmlwrite2(testresults)
    cleanup()
    logwrite('n', 'Stopped_script_at_' + str(time.time()))

```

